Prepare your live stream fundraising event with Streamlabs Charity to support United for Autism

We all know that a charity stream is a powerful way to raise funds for a cause that you're passionate about.

Using platforms like Twitch, YouTube and Facebook, influencers and content creators can connect with their followers and get them to donate to a cause that they believe in.

But we also know that hosting a successful charity live stream can be difficult.

- You have to keep viewers engaged and entertained.
- Handle the cash flow.
- And whether you do, you have to keep the charity and the center of attention.

Luckily, there's a new tool to help you run a smooth charity stream.

It's so good that we're recommending it as the go-to live stream platform to support the autism community.

Introducing Streamlabs Charity

The new tool is Streamlabs Charity. It's a free fundraising charity streaming tool for Twitch, YouTube or Facebook. Because you don't have to fiddle with complicated streaming settings, it's really easy to use. As easy as the click of a mouse.

But the best part is that it doesn't take a cut from the money you raise.

With the donations going straight into the charity fund, the money is going where it's supposed to go. For you, this means not worrying about tax implications or filling out (boring) paperwork.

And while you don't have to raise a big amount of money for your charity stream to be a success, especially if you don't have thousands or millions of fans, what counts is that you have the right tools and support system.

So as well as using Streamlabs as a fundraising tool, get in touch with us with any questions you may have about setting up a charity stream to raise money for people with autism.
